

Become a SweDev institutional support member

The Swedish Development Research Network (SweDev) aims to strengthen the links between development researchers based in Sweden and between development research, policy and practice. Unlike most other scientific disciplines, there is no relevant arena nor meeting place for development researchers based in Sweden. SweDev's objective is to increase the relevance of evidence-based development research for efficient policy-making and practice among Swedish actors working for Agenda 2030.

SweDev is hereby looking for institutional support members

SweDev aims to be institutionally anchored and led by Swedish academic institutions. The annual support membership fee is a minimum of SEK 5,000. However, since we at moment are in need of increased funding to continue with our activities, we are grateful for any additional financial support.

SweDev is not a member association in the traditional sense but the support membership fee contributes to secure financing for SweDev's activities.

Benefits for your institution

Institutional support members have a representative in SweDev's steering committee and are thereby guiding SweDev's activity plan and engagement. Institutional members are featured on the official SweDev website.

By becoming an institutional member, you directly contribute to building a stronger and more well-connected development research arena in Sweden. Your support enables us to arrange seminars, conferences and working groups that increase the possibilities for collaboration between researchers, policymakers and practitioners.

How to become an institutional support member

If your department or research group wants to become a support member:

- Pay a minimum of SEK 5,000 by bank transfer: 5614-7192, to the Stockholm Environment Institute.
- Mark the payment with reference number 100286.
- Send an email to alice.castensson@sei.org when you have paid the contribution.
- Once we have received your payment, we will publish your logo on SweDev's website.

About SweDev

SweDev is an initiative with over 180 active network members in Sweden. The aim is to connect development researchers across Sweden to further strengthen collaboration between the research community, practitioners and policymakers. SweDev aims to support the use of research-based knowledge for efficient policymaking and practice among Swedish actors working for the 2030 Agenda.

SweDev is generously funded by the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida), and led by a Steering Committee with representatives from Swedish academic institutions. The SweDev Secretariat is hosted by the Stockholm Environment Institute (SEI).
